

Mason Wetmore, a 6 grade classmate at Swampscott Middle School, was diagnosed in December 2016 with Crohn's Disease, a debilitating, medically incurable disease that attacks the digestive system.

Learning that Crohn's is a lifelong disease, Mason along with his mother Jill, have set out to educate the community and to raise funds for research toward a cure.

Mason was chosen by the Crohn's and Colitis Foundation as the Pediatric Honored Hero for 2017. He not only lead the local community but also the entire Boston community through sharing his story and leading by example with his fundraising. Please join Mason, your child's classmate, and stand up with him to help fund a cure for Crohn's Disease which affects 1.6 million Americans. Help send him the message that he is not alone in his hope for a cure.
